In order to increase the amount of data to be processed, the semiconductor is required to have a high transmission rate at the same time. It is known that the higher the transmission rate is, the shorter the electric wave traveling through the propagation path ("interval between waves"), and an electric wave to be reflected from the end point of the interval in the propagation path increases. As a result, a waveform having a sharp edge is formed in the reflection waveform. There is a single player campaign with a number of quests and puzzles, and a number of maps with pre-rendered objectives, full-on firefights, and other twists. After a number of hours playing in this content, we would not recommend this game to anyone expecting a linear, AI-controlled experience.
